

Textile Arts Center's Artist in Residence (TAC AIR) program equips emerging artists and designers with resources and skills to better articulate their practices and contribute to their communities. Situated at the intersection of a studio residency and an academic program, TAC AIR combines studio access with a rigorous interdisciplinary curriculum, regular critical dialogue and mentorship. The residency culminates in a group exhibition which showcases and promotes residents' work at both a regional and national level through additional catalogue materials.

A jury of TAC staff and professionals working in different fields of textile arts will select 6 residents to participate in the Cycle 9 of the AIR program, running from October 2017-June 2018.

TAC AIR Program Provides:

- Individual studio space
- 24-hour access to Textile Arts Center studio and equipment
- Technical classes in such techniques as weaving, spinning, machine knitting, and surface design
- Seminars in textile history, modern craft theory, and professional development (grant writing, branding, art law, material sourcing, photography)
- Critiques and Mentorship with professional designers and fiber artists
- Culminating group exhibition
